About The Totals Report

The first qualification phase is a computer qualification of the signatures submitted. The information provided by the signers such as voter number, last name and last four of social security number, Alaska driver's license number, etc. and signature date is entered into the statewide voter registration system. The computer qualification is run each night. If there is an exact match, the system automatically qualifies signers and they appear in the (Q) Computer Qualified: column. When the system does not match the information entered for signers, they appear in the Number of Unqualified column and the reasons why signatures are not qualified are listed on the right-hand column.

After the division completes the computer qualification phase, the division will manually review each signer that was not qualified during the computer qualification phase. This involves a manual search of the voter registration system for each signer to determine if they are a registered voter. If a successful match is found, the signer will be manually qualified and will appear in the (M) Manually Qualified column.

If a voter's registration record is inactivated before the receipt of the petition booklets, such as a voter who may have signed a booklet and then passed away after signing, they will appear in the (H) Inactive Qualified column. Since the signer was a qualified registered voter at the time of signing the petition, they are an eligible signature.
