Position Statement:

Originally from St. George Island, and currently living in Anchorage, I understand the issues from both Rural Alaska and Urban Alaska. The needs of our communities are largely not sufficiently supplied, and the red tape that's put on business across our state is shameful towards Alaska's development future. Alaska's past leadership has put us in a position of no return should we not bring our fiscal future on the right track. I believe in a bipartisan approach to solving Alaska's challenges. The infighting between Republicans and Democrats are toxic to the very way we legislate, and do a huge disservice to our constituency.

The next generations of Alaskans are fed up with a legislature that does not listen to their needs. As a young Alaskan, I share the vision of both the young and old. I won't be held to the belt of the Republican Party, I won't be held to the belt of the Democratic Party, for I will assure every member of District 18, and across the state, I will do what I envision is right for Alaska.
