Position Statement:
This upcoming election may be the most consequential vote since Statehood. The global virus has hit us hard, eroding the oil, tourism, and fishing revenues we depend on. Strong, conservative economic leadership is critical now to ensure Alaska is a place to live, work and raise a family, and that is why I am running for a second term.

I bring significant financial experience, a demonstrated ability to work collaboratively, and deep Alaska roots to this race. Like you, I want our children and grandchildren to find opportunity and call Alaska home. My core priorities for a second term are:

Long-term fiscal sustainability: I support preserving core government services, delivering those services efficiently, and making sure that government spending, including the Permanent Fund dividend, is held to levels that are sustainable for the long term.

Spending cap: We cannot continue to spend our earnings and savings. We need an effective spending cap in place to check future government spending growth the next time oil prices shoot up.

Protect the Permanent Fund: The Permanent Fund is Alaska’s greatest economic asset and we must protect it for future generations. We need leaders in Juneau to commit to spending 5% or less of the fund’s earnings to allow it to continue to grow and remain a financial engine.
Economic growth: Our state needs to invest in education and job preparedness, as well as infrastructure. These strategic investments create jobs that give working Alaskans the livelihood to enjoy life in our great state.
